The majority of the Indian workforce lacks marketable skills, with only 5% obtaining formal vocational training. The SDIS is a public-private partnership between the government and industry to promote skills development programs for early school dropouts and existing workers, especially in the unorganized sector. The main goal is to provide employable skills and test and certify existing skills for school leavers, workers, ITI graduates, etc. The priority is given to those above 14 years of age who have been withdrawn as child labor. The SDIS aims to bring transparency and gather valuable feedback from stakeholders and the public.

Benefits

1. Improved employability: The MES scheme is designed to provide vocational training to individuals in various sectors, making them more employable in the job market.
2. Flexible training: The training provided under the MES scheme is modular, meaning that it can be taken up in parts, making it flexible for individuals to learn at their own pace.
3. Certification: The MES scheme provides certification for the skills learned, which is recognized by the industry, making it easier for individuals to get jobs.
4. Skill development: The MES scheme provides training in various skills, including soft skills, technical skills, and practical skills, which help in the overall development of an individual.
5. Cost-effective: The MES scheme is a cost-effective way of providing vocational training to individuals, as the training is provided in modules, reducing the cost of training.
6. Encourages entrepreneurship: The MES scheme also encourages entrepreneurship by providing training in various sectors, making it easier for individuals to start their own businesses.

Overall, the MES scheme has been beneficial in providing vocational training to individuals and improving their employability, which is important for the growth of the Indian economy.
